

GIMBEL BALL SHOWS HOST OF PRETTY GIRLS DANCING IN FAIRYLAND

Eighth Floor Turned Over to Employees for Their Annual Celebration.

Did you ever notice how many pretty girls—how very many pretty girls—there are at Gimbel's?

No, and you never will until you are lucky enough some time to attend the annual dance of the Gimbel Brothers' employees. Then you will see all the beauties of the house at one time in one place. Whereupon you will say: "I have beheld the tenth wonder of the world; the greatest assemblage of charming ones ever; some girls!"

They had one of those annual functions last night. All evening long every kind of transportation service that led to Broadway and Thirty-third Street was carrying bright-eyed lassies and stalwart lads to the big building that fills half the block.

Two of the most popular men in the house greeted the arrivals at the broad Thirty-third Street entrance and made them welcome. A battery of elevators—don't let in more than sixteen to a car, Bill, for fear of crushing the ladies' gowns—carried them up to fairyland, known on ordinary occasions as the eighth floor.

Four hundred feet by two hundred feet of floor space were transformed into the smoothest, biggest ballroom you ever saw. Should think they'd need to have two orchestras. They did. They had. One was in the tea-room, at the east end; the other in the piano room, at the northwest end of the great ballroom, and the dancers simply floated from the ecstasies of one to the ecstasies of the other without once losing step, and Prof. Maurice M. Kirk performed with ease the seemingly impossible feat of leading two bands of music-makers at one time.

Besides, there were Miss Lili Carlquist and her entire company, with a fascinating song review, and other leading vocalists from Lee, Feist, Remick's, Shapiro's and the Enterprise Company, to say nothing of Lewis K. Marckwald, pianist, who showed that even a busy buyer for the house has time to perfect himself in the divine art, and Miss Bijou Ker-pen, whose charming singing was equaled only by her graceful dance-ing.

Four thousand young folks made a night of it. They had all the dancing they needed by beginning four hours before midnight and stopping at 1 o'clock, instead of beginning at midnight and stopping at 5 A. M. They were under the roof of the House, where there could be none of the roughness or drinking that might mar the pleasure of the occasion in a public resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Lewis, Bernard and Frederic Gimbel joined in the dancing and funmaking; the roof garden was a bower of flowers and glowing electric lights, the supper was delightful, as only Miss McDonald's suppers can be. A pleasant occasion was reported by one and all.

New Portraits By Miss Norton Show Her Skill

The season that is just closing has been a busy one with Miss S. Mary Norton. She is now preparing to flit away to her summer camp in the Pocono Mountains. Miss Norton was a pupil of Carroll Beckwith, and she is, therefore, strictly academic.
Among the recent portraits painted by her is one of Miss Margaret Reason of Orange, N. J., posing as a violinist. This portrait is done in a style that favors of Dresden china.
Thin pink is used over delicate blue, which becomes highly effective in combination with the girl's golden hair. Warm tones are used to accent the violin, held in playing posture, with drawn bow.

A portrait of Miss Ruth Olmstead of Denver, Col., daughter of the Bishop of Colorado, is executed by Miss Norton after the old English school. It is an oval portrait. The head is full of character, distinction and sweetness. The color is well handled to suit the composition.
Black and gold, with a touch of pink, largely make up the color scheme.

Her portrait of Mrs. Henry Stewart of Salt Lake City was painted as a wedding gift. It is in half length.
It is a study in golden tones. A rich golden scarf is a decided factor in the painting, superimposed, as it is, on white. The portrait was finished in a warm brown background.

A very interesting thing done some time ago by Miss Norton is now at the Powell Gallery, on Sixth Avenue.
It is entitled "The Engineer of the Fast Express," and was painted according to the most efficient methods.
The New York, New Haven and

Hartford Railroad ran one of its Mogul engines out of the round house especially for Miss Norton, so it was possible to get all of the required "atmosphere." The engineer is shown seated in his cab with his hand on the throttle. His gaze is straight ahead. The engine machinery radiates the light in so many ways that it was a nice problem to work it out into proper values. However, Miss Norton did just this with much skill.

She has on her easel at present a portrait of Master Austin Beardsley of East Orange, N. J. The boy appears seated in an unadorned pose in a large chair, with an open book.
He wears knickerbockers and socks.
His suit is white and his collar is blue.

The composition is noteworthy and the colors, while they are under careful restraint, are nevertheless highly effective. The same is true of the floor, reflection that the artist has registered.

Among the other portraits recently executed by Miss Norton are those of Miss Ada Stewart, Dr. and Mrs.
Channing of Boston and Mrs. Olmstead, wife of the Bishop of Colorado.

Tomorrow is Tooth Brush Day School children who care for their teeth do better work—that has been conclusively proved.

The schools of New York have set tomorrow as Tooth Brush Day, showing that they fully appreciate this—just as thousands of schools all over the country have taught this lesson with

Care of the teeth is simple—and with Colgate's a pleasure, owing to its delicious flavor instead of the usual "druggery" taste. It tastes good and does good.
Here, reduced to simplest terms, are suggestions for the care of the teeth.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CARE OF THE TEETH

Use Ribbon Dental Cream twice a day. See your dentist twice a year.

Thousands of school children will receive this good advice on Tooth Brush Day and follow it thereafter. You, too, should use Colgate's.

Dr. Wiley says:
"Neglected teeth are more dangerous than analgus."

Dr. Oster says:
"The hygiene of the mouth—there is not one single thing more important to the public in the whole range of hygiene."

The N. Y. Sun says (quoting Mr.
